MARCINKOWSKI'S "WIFE."

She Was Not Legally Married, and He Loses by It.

Judge Murphy yesterday rendered a judgment in favor of Mary Carlisle, administratrix of the estate of Isabella Marcinkowski, against Joseph Marcinkowski.

This was a suit involving the legal barrier of miscegenation. Isabella F. Marcinkowski died intestate on July 28, 1893, owning a house on Pine street, near Mason. On February 27, 1895, her husband, Joseph, entered the property, and the administratrix, Mrs. Carlisle, promptly brought a suit for ejectment, assessing her damages at $1000.

Joseph, who is a tailor, claimed the ownership of the house on the ground that he married Isabella in 1877, and lived with her until the time of her death; that he had contributed $4000 toward the building of the house, and having lost and repurchased it, he had placed it in Mrs. Marcinkowski's name, believing her to be his lawful wife.

At that point his case failed, for it was proved that Isabella Marcinkowski was a mulatto, and the law did not recognize any union between the parties as marriage.

The judgment against Marcinkowski was "for the plaintiff for possession of the premises, and $50 damages for retention thereof."
